14, 2006 Mind How You Go Over the weekend my son Travis turned 14. I remember how hard it was to wait until he was 16 to graduate. It was his last summer before he left home. I'm glad he didn't mind that. I was worrying. Of course he still had to go to high school. He had to do four years of that. He had to go to college. All during the four years of high school he had the same job: Go to school. Work at home. And wait until he graduated. But then he was free to get a job. At one time in my career I was a high school teacher. And what I was doing to them when they were 10 and 11 years old was killing them. So my biggest fear was that he would graduate from high school and go to work like he did in elementary school. It is a huge accomplishment. Now, I have no fear. I now know that he will go to college and find a job in the future. I have seen students who have been at the same high school since kindergarten. They have the same teachers. Same playground. Same lunchroom.
Everything is the same. Year after year. And those same students have developed more and more wrinkles the further they go.
